Barrington is already suffering from traffic congestion because of the commuter trains. Adding yet another heavily traveled rail line - increasing traffic on the Elgin line - would strangle the downtown area and make it nearly impossible to navigate through the downtown area.

The cross cross effect of the commuter train plus the added traffic on the Elgin line presents a safety hazard because of the possibility of cars being blocked on the way to the hospital or police or fire personnel reaching their destinations to help citizens.

Without an overpass or an underpass, this added traffic will absolutely strangle the village.
