Mr. Blodgett,

I live in Montana; in fact, I commute across a railroad track and often have to wait for a coal train to pass. The coal dust is known to adversely affect health. The irony is that most of this coal is being shipped to China, where it pollutes their air and increases carbon dioxide levels, which causes climate change that we Montanans acutely felt this summer and fall as forest fire smoke choked our breathing. Please do not allow another coal line to be built in our last best place: stop the Tongue River Railroad.

Mr. Blodgett,

The last thing Montana needs is another dirty coal rail line that will pollute our air, bisect our ranches and result in decreased property values. Put Montana families before coal company profits, and don't let the Tongue River Railroad pollute Montana. Private property means precisely that, no one should ever be forced to sell land they do not want to, regardless of others' interests. To even consider destroying good land in Montana simply to fatten railroad and coal company wallets is obscene. Sending resources overseas is as bad as outsourcing jobs. I hope you will ignore the few money interests and act to protect American land and private property rights.

Eastern Montana is not an industrial sacrifice zone. It is a fragile environment. In global terms, the coal of eastern Montana (and the rest of the US) should be left in place, sequestered. That is the cleanest coal there is although we have political talk of another, mythical, clean coal. We have yet to see that one. This is another one of the great environmental issues that is not being discussed in the political arena. Please, adopt the precautionary principle on this one. Don't do anything until we know all the potential impacts and their unintended consequences.

The Tongue River Valley is a special place AND a productive ranching community! The last thing Montana –or the valley–needs is another dirty coal rail line that will pollute our air, bisect our ranches and result in decreased property values. Put Montana families before coal company profits, and don't let the Tongue River Railroad pollute Montana. If this railroad goes in, it's the valley's death warrant as well as yet another level of increase for climate change. As I write this, Hurricane Sandy, pegged as a super storm, is hovering over the mid-Atlantic states, informing us all of the direct and destructive consequences of global warming and climate change. More coal mined, shipped and burned will contribute to even more frequent such extreme weather events. Please heed nature's hint – do NOT approve the Tongue River Railroad!

Mr. Blodgett,

Once again it seems like the coal industry is trying to run rough shod over and take advantage of Montanans. The last thing Montana needs is another dirty coal rail line that will pollute our air, bisect our ranches and result in decreased property values. I have commented in other formats saying I don't understand our nation's role in global issues if we say one thing, but do another. We need to control and limit just not this country's role in global warming, but encourage other nation's as well to control greenhouse gases. In this case we are making it easier for other countries to pollute the world's atmosphere at the feet of Montana ranchers. Put Montana families before coal company profits, and don't let the Tongue River Railroad pollute Montana.

And respect the land and the people and critter who live on it. It is not only present but future generations that would have to pay the price of not doing so. Whoever stands to profit from this coal transport proposal could be helped to put food on the table in some other way. This technology is a part of the past. Let's look to clean energy for the present and future and not sign on to any proposal that changes the land and threatens the quality of life. Coal development in Montana is being sold with the belief that it will provide jobs for Montanans. This is true however, the amount of jobs created by coal extraction is a fraction of the jobs that will be lost by the disturbance to ecosystems, natural beauty, habitat and the climate change. Montana's landscape is an asset that will provide for Montanans for generations to come if we take care of the land and do not abuse it for a few to become rich. Ever been to Butte? Come on, lets invest in a future that has a future!

Coal trains would run directly through my community, Bozeman, and many others as well, bringing more noise, pollution, traffic delays, and hazards to people and wildlife. The Bozeman Pass area could see a major increase in train-related wildlife mortality, as wildlife seeking to migrate north and south along the Rockies must cross the tracks. The idea of sending Montana's coal all the way to China pretty much exemplifies the insanity of corporations ready to sacrifice our climate for more development and profit.

Put Montana families before coal company profits, and don't let the Tongue River Railroad pollute Montana. The idea of clean coal is disgusting. Everyone that studies or has worked in the coal industry knows it is the dirtiest fuel available. Calling it clean is a joke. Stop using coal until you are willing to put in writing the amount of pollution that will be generated on a per ton rate along with all the backup data needed to prove your assumptions.

Mr. Ken Blodgett,

RE: Docket No. FD 30186

Mr. Blodgett,

I've been teaching secondary science here in Miles City along the Tongue River for over 20 years. Since 1994 I've taken students out to sample the water quality and macro-invertebrates on the river. It's obvious that this river, a treasure and lifeline in Eastern Montana, has its challenges with heavy irrigation withdrawals and coal bed methane water inputs from Wyoming. The last thing this riparian ecosystem needs is a railroad on its banks and a strip mine upstream tearing up the aquifers. Allowing this project to proceed is putting greed and big corporations ahead of the environment and local agriculture. Agriculture, especially ranching, along the river is the best use for this land and most compatible with the native ecosystems. The coal resource can be utilized in a more responsible way that will not disrupt our way of life and the ecosystem. As we speak, the microbes in the coal seams are converting a very dirty fuel into clean natural gas. This gas could be "harvested" over the long-term without the environmental disasters of strip mines and rail lines. I hope you make the right decision for the benefit of the life that calls this valley home.

Sincerely,

Mr. Blodgett,

The last thing Montana needs is another dirty coal rail line that will pollute our air, bisect our ranches and result in decreased property values. Put Montana families before coal company profits, and don't let the Tongue River Railroad pollute Montana.

Mr. Blodgett,

The environmental costs outweigh BY FAR the benefits that any Montanan will see. End this kind of extraction of Montana's non-renewable resources to FUEL CONTINUED POPULATION GROWTH in China. This kind of proposal only acts to the LONG-TERM detriment of everyone on this planet! Not everything that makes money is good for our future.

Mr. Blodgett,

I just learned about Arch Coal and Burlington Northern plans to build a rail line in eastern Montana. As a Montana resident and supporter of our ranching landowners, I am writing to say how wrong I think these short term exploits are for the future of Montana. I do not want to see coal trains crossing Montana for export to China! Please protect Montana from international exploit and listen to the landowners affected by this plan!

Mr. Blodgett,

I am very opposed to the Tongue River Railroad application to build a new rail line to carry coal through Montana to Asia. From a public health standpoint, pollution is associated with serious health concerns like respiratory and cardiovascular disease as well as cancer. Prevention is the key to lowering these health issues and prevention starts with keeping the air we breathe clean. Furthermore, Montana's economy is growing from tourism and if we destroy our environment we will lose this revenue long after the coal is gone.

Mr. Blodgett,

Montana's unique resources are worth more than coal profits. Our intact family ranches, our clean air and wide open spaces are values that last through the generations. We need strong communities and healthy landscapes more than we need the profits from selling our resources to a foreign country. PLEASE do NOT allow the Tongue River Railroad. Its a terrible idea. Put Montana families before coal company profits.

Put Montana families before coal company profits, and don't let the Tongue River Railroad pollute Montana. Speaking as a person with lifelong ties to Montana, whose family owns land there, whose sister lives there, I ask you to stop this travesty before it begins. I live in Eugene, OR, where the city council has just voted against allowing the coal trains to come through. Don't you understand, nobody wants this but the coal companies, and they have to face the fact that their time is coming to an end. Our planet can no longer sustain the use of coal for energy.
